

TO WHOMSOEVER IT MAY CONCERN

Since its launch in 2005, Centre for Creative Expressions works with young people from all walks of life with the arts as inspiration. We work with street children, children in conflict with law, school children, and young adults in search of the Self. We have produced theatre festivals held in unusual spaces across several cities in the subcontinent. We continue to research theatre practice and music quite intensely, apart from also sharing our finds in yoga and recycling. In the process, many a brilliant artiste has passed through our doors.

The creators of 'The Legend of Ila' are numbered among these fearless creative soldiers we have worked with over the years, dazzling us as performers and as teachers of music and theatre. Theirs is a most unique individual style, bringing a completely fresh and clear outlook to the performing arts. With their show 'The Legend of Ila', they have made a true transgression of love: tackling gender, identity, transformation and acceptance with such ease, and electrifying magic. Taking a rare story from Indian mythology and allowing it to resonate with contemporary questions makes it an absolutely fascinating experience, which we feel must be shared with people all over the globe.

We wish them all the very best on their journey ahead and look forward to many such collaborations in the time to come as well.

Love and Light,

Dilip Shankar
